4 Perks to working at Chick-fil-A!

Working at a Chick-fil-A restaurant may include a few things one would expect – preparing food, taking orders and serving guests. However, Chick-fil-A Team Members tell us in their own words, the four perks of working at a Chick-fil-A restaurant:

1. The opportunity to earn scholarships

"I applied to Chick-fil-A because it's not just a business here – it's about serving people and making people happy," says Saskya Simon, who was awarded a $25,000 True Inspiration Scholarship from Chick-fil-A, Inc. "This scholarship is allowing me to live out my dream of attending medical school, and I'm so appreciative of that."

How do Team Members earn one? It's not just good grades – it's their community service and hard work that pay off, too!

2. Great people, great friendships

Hard work is fun when the right team is by your side. Restaurant Team Members enjoy making incredible memories and lasting relationships with their coworkers. Jordan Manganello, a Team Member at Chick-fil-A Lebanon, put it best when she said, "I've established personal connections with my fellow Team Members that never would have been possible, if not for working at this Chick-fil-A."

3. Scheduling flexibility

The friendly, warm atmosphere that guests experience at Chick-fil-A extends behind the scenes, too. Chick-fil-A franchisees ("Operators") know that people are busy, schedules can be complicated, and life happens – that's why they strive to offer flexibility when it comes to scheduling Team Members' shifts. Heather Rosenberg is a mom, a nursery-school owner and a dining room hostess at Chick-fil-A Hicksville. "The flexible scheduling allows me to teach during the day and bring smiles to our guests in the evening," says Rosenberg.

4. Far from the average restaurant job

Team Members at Chick-fil-A restaurants often have the opportunity to advance their skills in important areas like customer relations and team management. And many restaurants offer positions like social media and marketing director, which make for impressive resume-boosters.
